

Indiana Motorcycle Safety Memorial

On Sunday, May 6, 2001, around one thousand motorcyclists gathered to dedicate the nation's first Motorcycle Safety Memorial in Lawrence County. The memorial, located at the entrance of the Lawrence County Recreational Park, celebrates the memory of those who have advanced motorcycle safety in the state of Indiana.

The memorial stone itself was cut from the same vein of granite in India from which the Vietnam Veterans Wall in Washington, DC was made. The eight foot tall stone weighs over four-and-a-half tons and is etched with an American flag, a flying eagle and a road scene that snakes around three sides before fading into infinity. Wearly Monuments of Muncie personally oversaw the cutting and placing of the stone. The gleaming black stone sits atop a marbled, illuminated base and is open 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

Adorning the memorial are personalized bricks that can be purchased by the motorcycling public and personalized with messages or names that will pave a path through the memorial.
